BEST-DRESSED puppet on Canadian television is Teddy Forman's rabbit, Hoppy, who co-stars with her every Monday, Wednesday and Friday on Nursery School Time. Hoppy, who began his season on television as a rabbit "au naturel," with nary a costume to his wardrobe, has since acquired so many new outfits that unless Miss Teddy keeps a watchful eye on her colleague, she may find she is coping with television's most vain puppet.

"Hoppy, to some extent," according to A. M. Fotheringham, the program organizer in charge of Nursery School Time, "represents the child in the home." He asks questions children might be expected to ask, joins in the songs as the children are expected to do, and assists in the presentation of stories and projects. He also provides a little comic relief.

Dick, the sophisticated beaver puppet who appears on the Tuesday and Thursday programs with Hoppy, who began his season on television as a rabbit "au naturel," has since acquired so many new outfits that unless Miss Teddy keeps a watchful eye on her colleague she may find she is coping with television's most vain puppet.

Hoppy and Dick

Nursery School Time's puppets are stealing the limelight from Miss Teddy and Maman Fon Fon

Maman Fon Fon "is a more mature chap." Although he too has his mischievous moments, and although he assists in the presentation of the program in much the same way as does Hoppy, he has an almost person-to-person relationship with Maman Fon Fon, in contrast to the mother-child relationship between Miss Teddy and Hoppy.

Children recognize the different personalities of the two puppets. "Dick is very smart. I like him," they write about the beaver. But of Hoppy they say, "I am like Hoppy—I like surprises."

Children all across Canada have grown to love Hoppy, Dick, Miss Teddy, Maman Fon Fon, and of course the two real animals who also appear from time to time—Smoky, Miss Teddy's kitten, and Miki, Maman Fon Fon's dog. Letters, dictated by enthusiastic young fans to busy parents, arrive at the CBC at the rate of about 100 a week.

A four-year-old boy, emotionally disturbed and unable to talk, laugh, or cry, since he was in an accident some time ago, is learning to speak again. His mother gives much of the credit for his recent improvement to Nursery School Time which he watches regularly. He has learned to laugh at Hoppy and Dick, and to ask questions about them. He even begs his mother to write Miss Teddy and tell her: "I take my kitty to bed and his name is Bob-tail."

Another mother writes: "The children and I enjoy your Nursery School Time program very much. In fact it has solved a serious problem in our household. Our four-year-old was becoming so fed up with the two older children dominating the conversation with what they did at school and what their teacher said, that she was beginning to tell long, elaborate stories. So we all watch your program but it is Nancy's in particular, and hers alone to tell her Daddy about when he comes home and thus there is no need for fabrication."

It seems that Miss Teddy and Maman Fon Fon are not simply grey outlines on a television screen. The children (most of them are aged three to five years) feel they have a very personal relationship with the teachers and animals.

They answer the questions they are asked as they sit before their television set, they join in the songs, and they worry about what Miss Teddy or Maman Fon Fon might think about the activity they are sure the teachers can see going on in their living-rooms.

One little girl refuses to step into the living-room when the program is on unless she is looking her prettiest. "How embarrassing," writes her mother, "when you (Miss Teddy) appeared on another program and she had on her py-jamas."

A four-year-old boy insisted on setting his birthday cake in front of the television set in order that Miss Teddy could see it. "You are really honoured," says his mother, "for he is quite a shy little fellow. It has taken him about two months to answer you and take part in your program."

Nursery School Time is prepared by the CBC School Broadcasts Department in co-operation with nursery school experts.

"EVER SINCE I was a little girl my one ambition was to be on the stage, or in the movies," says Laura Lindsay, popular hostess on Edmonton's CFRN-TV. "My TV show is the culmination of this lifelong dream."

Laura's TV career began in the summer of 1956 when, after watching some of the local male personalities attempt to do a homemakers' show, she announced to her family, rather jokingly, that she would enjoy doing this type of work. "I felt I had something to offer women viewers," she explains. She visited CFRN-TV, explained her idea, and was hired on the spot without being subjected to the usual audition.

Since then Laura has been the official hostess of Edmonton's Channel 3. Her present early afternoon show, Siesta Fiesta, is viewed by a large majority of homemakers in the station's coverage area. It combines cooking, homemaking, sewing, and other practical subjects for housewives, with interviews with interesting people. Laura ends each show by introducing a movie of her choice, keeping in mind the varied tastes of her viewing public.

"On the show I feel that I am exchanging ideas with other women," Laura says. "I never try to teach. I prefer to use an informal approach with the viewers; I want them to feel that I am in their living rooms with them."

Where the Men Failed ... Laura Succeeded

The story of CFRN-TV's hostess Laura Lindsay

Station manager Sid Lancaster says: "Being a mature woman with a family, Laura is able to speak with authority on all subjects of interest to women. She has proven highly popular with viewers and staff alike."

Laura, in private life Mrs. Ben Banks, is one of those fortunate women who have been able to combine successfully the roles of mother and career woman. She lives amid a beehive of family activity created by five children ranging in age from 9 to 22.

Her hectic TV days average eight to ten hours. The mornings are taken up with visits to sponsors, gathering material for the show, planning the program and preparing the afternoon's cooking portion. For a couple of hours after each show she digs in to help clear up the kitchen set and do the dishes. Since she prepares all of the food herself she also shops in the morning for the ingredients needed. Members of CFRN-TV's studio crew gladly testify to her cooking ability.

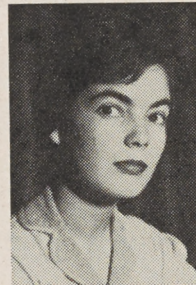

Because she is away from her family so much, Laura makes every effort to spend all her free time with them. Despite her busy schedule, the family is closely knit, sharing mutual interests in everything from fly-fishing to music.

Laura does her show without a script or assistant, and her informality puts her guests at ease immediately. She interviews her guests in either the kitchen or the living room, depending on which she thinks would make the guest more comfortable. Laura, who has never been nervous before the camera, explains: "I talk to an individual, rather than to a camera or an audience."

Laura steadfastly refuses to name a favorite guest. To her "the guest of the moment is the most important and most interesting."

About television in general she says: "I consider TV to be an absolutely wonderful thing in the house if people learn to accept it and not let it rule. Most thinking adults have recognized the educational potential of TV when parents and children use discretion in their viewing habits."

P.A. Talent Winner CBWT Guest Friday

Bonnie Hicks

A 17-year-old high school girl, recently named winner of a 13-week talent series on CKBI-TV, Prince Albert, will be in Winnipeg this week to appear on CBWT's The Show That Jack Built on Friday night (April 17).

She is Bonnie Hicks, a grade 11 student at Prince Albert Collegiate, whose singing won her the top spot on Spotlight on Talent in competition with 45 other contestants.

Bonnie's activities are numerous and varied. She has won a medal for swimming, taken part in oratorical contests, and done some modelling. She showed an interest in singing at a very early age and had taken part in many stage entertainments and performed on radio before appearing on Spotlight on Talent.

Purpose of Spotlight on Talent, according to Mr. J. J. Cennon, CKBI-TV production manager who directed the show, was to give contestants from the northern and central parts of Saskatchewan a chance to advance in their own fields of entertainment by gaining some experience in television.

Although the artists accepted for the series were all amateurs, they were given special coaching by pianist Pierre Jutras and the production staff in order to take the program out of the "amateur hour" class and turn it into quality entertainment for the station's viewers.

are mainly lists—lists of ideas, lists of plots, lists of probable sales, lists of things I might revise, lists of things I might adapt, and, most of all, lists which embody elaborate schedules for getting impossible and superhuman amounts of work done, like “Work 3 hrs. daily on book, 1 hr. on other scripts, 2 hrs. reading,” etcetera.

Such lists almost always culminate in an exquisitely worked-out chart which proves beyond all doubt that if I write 2,000 words a day I'll have my book finished in 30 days. I have one list posted above my desk, with a column running up and down the side of it, sort of like the graphs used by the blood-bank drives or the community chest. Each successive level represents another 2,000 words, and I kept valiantly and triumphantly filling in with red color crayon—until my thermometer got stuck. It's been at 22,000 degrees for six months now.

It stands to reason I am especially fond of New Year's. What other time affords such a wonderful opportunity to make really earth-shaking lists? I can toss off 25 or 30 resolutions in no time at all. "Read fewer book reviews and more books!" "Don't write so many letters, write more stories!" "Lose 10 pounds!" (I write that one everywhere—it's a wonder I don't put it on my grocery lists, where, come to think of it, it might do some good!)

My husband, viewing my list-making passion with the analytical curiosity an anthropologist bends upon human foibles, long ago concluded that for me listing is a kind of magic. It really has nothing to do with jotting things down in order not to forget them; I'm not likely to forget that I need to lose 10 pounds, not with my closet jammed with undersized clothes I'm longing to be able to wear. No, I'm sure he's right. I write lists because I feel, in some primitive corner of my being, that if I get things on paper I have them in my power. Something listed is as good as half done. And I have more half-done lists than any other housewife in captivity, believe me.

Once a list is completed, there is a rare and strange joy in crossing it out. I used to keep my general household lists on the side of the refrigerator, using purple crayon; there is a marvelous, unrivalled satisfaction in crossing things out with purple crayon. I've always felt a little sorry since we moved the refrigerator and I've had to go back to paper and pencil.

A new, pristine list without any cancellations is empty promises and mere vanity. A list with everything cancelled except that one thing you know you will never do (like “Lose 10 pounds”) is an abomination. A list is at its best when it is still neatly written out, looks ambitious, and testifies to the good intentions of its author with a moderately high percentage of firm, vigorous crossings-out.

The proper management of lists, or listmanship, is not something that can be learned or imparted overnight. However, there are a few pointers I think I can pass on to you.

One good approach which leads to rapid, effective crossing-out and a consequent feeling of accomplishment and virtue is list-packing. It's very simple. What you do is to be sure to put on each list a few things you want to do not because they must be done for rea-

(Please turn to page 31)

I AM a great, indefatigable list-maker. As a maker of lists, in fact, I bow to no one, not even to my mother-in-law, who used to rise every morning and make such a long and extensive list of the things she had to do that by the time the list was complete the morning had half fled and she was too exhausted to do more than totter to the stove and pour yet another cup of coffee before lying down for a nap.

I have lists for everything. Bills to pay, chores to do, people to write, birthdays to remember, garden tools to return—these are the mundane lists that I make every few days. But I have other lists—lists of things I want to buy, for example, ranging from something I might conceivably squeeze out of the household money next week to something I might conceivably get my hands on if the Aga Khan sent me a bushel of diamonds as a small token of his esteem. I have lists of things I should write and things I should read. I have lists of self-improvement projects, for the improvement of everything from my figure (“Lose 10 pounds”) to my disposition (Don’t yell at the kids”).

My writing notebooks, instead of being the wise, discursive, perceptive volumes that pose as writers' notebooks in the public library,

A Technologist Looks at Humanism

by JOHN HART, Carleton University, Ottawa
(as broadcast on CBC Trans-Canada)

Scientists are under attack. We are attacked because we refuse to accept professional responsibility for the use that you, my auditors, make of the by-products of our research: that is, of our technology. Our attackers know little of science, they understand nothing of even the most feebly endowed and poorly trained scientific mind. They accuse us of over-specialization, particularly in our school and college education. We admit that we are in outlook and training, specialists: to achieve any significant advance in our discipline, we just have to specialize. I shall explain how and why in a moment. But, please do not think for a moment that we are not interested in humanity; the queer thing is, that as we become more highly specialized, we also have to become more interested in the impact of our findings upon society. The point that I want to make is that we have no claims, as scientists, to say what mankind shall or shall not do. And, as a matter of fact, scientists who make such pronouncements are just as often wrong as they are right.

Moral Responsibility

The moral responsibility for the sensible application of scientific achievements belongs not to the scientists but to students of the widest aspects of man's endeavour; to scholars whose proper study is humanity. Sometimes these scholars are members of university faculties of arts and social sciences, sometimes they are priests, sometimes they are professional writers. They are not scientists, they are proud of being not-scientists; they are, they say, humanists.

Arrogance

One of the characteristics of the humanist is the very arrogance with which he is so ready to label the scientist. A recent committee on the humanistic aspects of science was composed of "individuals who are not practicing or professional scientists." In the reports of the proceedings, we read "After three centuries of clamouring for recognition, no scientist can protest if his neighbours seek a full-length view." There's arrogance for you! The field is open and the view is there for all to see who are not too short-sighted.

I will try to give you a full-length view, and you may see why we are specialists. The scientist has to develop a fiendish devotion to a single idea. He strips the idea of its accessories, he separates it from the environment; consciousness is to him irrelevant in all but the most elementary and the most advanced concepts. He has to develop a model, based upon his daily experiences in the world; you might call it a theory or a hypothesis. He has a slavish dependence upon this model. The scientist makes his model of, say a light beam, and says it behaves "as if" it were a wave of something or "as if" it were a bunch of particles travelling with a certain speed. By making this model, he can predict certain things, and the further he pursues his theory, the less like the every day things around him does his model seem to become. In fact, as he follows co-stars with Lucille Ball in Lucy Wants a Career Monday night on CBC-TV. Lucy tries to get a job on an early morning television program in this hour-long comedy on "Desilu Playhouse."

"Scan" looks tonight into the effect of television on libraries.

The Millionaire

This week — "Terence Costigan." When Michael Anthony blacks out following a car accident, he loses a cashier's cheque made out for a million dollars. A street cleaner named Costigan finds the cheque and then discovers he can't get rid of it.

Cross-Canada Hit Parade

Famed recording artists the Crew Cuts join regulars Wally Koster, Joyce Hahn and Bert Niosi and his orchestra to present the nation's top tunes. From Toronto.

Cannonball

Canadian film series about a trucker and his family starring Paul Birch and Beth Lockerbie. This week—"Undercover." Jerry does some undercover work for the police to help discover the thief who is stealing shipments from the trucking company's warehouses. Mike does not know about this and almost loses his life while trying to trail Jerry.

Desilu Playhouse

Tonight—Guest star Paul Douglas becomes Lucille Ball's unwilling boss in a play titled "Lucy Wants a Career." In this special comedy hour the irrepressible Lucy Ricardo decides that her life as a housewife and mother has become humdrum, so to spice up her existence she applies for a job as Girl Friday on a daytime television show starring Paul Douglas. By some hilarious scheming she lands the job and sets in motion 60 minutes of fast-moving, laugh-filled complications. Also appearing with Lucy, Desi and guest star Douglas are Vivian Vance, William Frawley and Richard (little Ricky) Keith. Douglas' versatile performances in both dramatic and comedy role have won him countless admirers among the North American public. "Lucy Wants a Career" was written by Bob Schiller and Bob Weiskopf.

the logical consequence of one theory to a thrilling conclusion, he finds that it melts in his hands, and he has to invent and investigate another less plausible model. It is just like Alice's egg; we are travelling from our everyday world in the direction of the boundary of all knowledge, only to find that it retreats from us at exactly our speed of approach. This perpetual retreat from the familiar things of our world epitomizes the supreme contradiction in the phrase "ultimate truth." Only the student who has taken part in this retreat can appreciate the humility of science. The scientist breaks his problem down into component parts and goes hell-for-leather after one of them. If he does this, he is eventually faced in a very practical way with the nature of reality, and, paradoxically, he may even become a humanist.

This attitude is, of course, reflected at all levels of scientific education. Science courses are highly specialized. They have to be so. But—and here is the beam in their own eye that our attackers must remove — specialization is inimical to the development of a humanist. The so-called scientific method has become flybait, particularly for the academic humanist; the non-science graduates of our universities are not humanists, they are specialists. We have professors of classical civilization, of religion, of sociology, but not one student of the grand concept of humanism, the glorious and tragic saga of mankind. "The specializing tendency is so strong," says Harcourt Brown, "that it seems improbable that we shall see a restoration of the old full richness of the humanities." But why not? Universities used to breed wonderfully unspecialized humanists—can they not do the same thing today? It is not the sciences but the humanities that are too specialized. The humanist has been literally hopelessly confused by the scientific attitude and unfortunately imagines that his own scholarship

La Strada (The Road)

A special film feature starring Anthony Quinn, Giulietta Masina, Richard Basehart, and Aldo Silvani. A sad-sweet tragedy, it tells of a half-witted peasant girl enslaved by a travelling strong man, a treacherous brute who treats her with indifference and occasional cruelty until, hearing of her death later, he feels for the first time alone and frightened in the world. "La Strada," an Italian-made film, won the Venice International Film Festival Grand Prize in 1954, and Academy Award for the best foreign film in 1956, the New York Film Critic's Award, and many other honours. It will be introduced by Charles Templeton. NOTE: This program will be cancelled if there is a Stanley Cup Play-off game tonight.

This Is Stanley Cup Week

CBC To Televis All Games In Final

Hockey fans throughout the country needn't miss a moment of action in this year's Stanley Cup finals as the CBC plans to broadcast and televise all games from the opening face-off.

This includes games in American cities as well as Canadian, plus any overtime periods which may be required to decide a winner. NHL play-off policy is to play sudden-death overtime in 20-minute periods. That is any num-meet either Boston or Toronto in the seven-game final.

The Canadiens' other high-flying right-winger Bernie Geoffrion, who had been rested late in the season, rejoined the club for the Chicago series. Just as the injury-plagued league champions seemed to be coming to full strength, they lost the services of Jean Beliveau, the NHL's goal-scoring leader and ace centre-man. Beliveau was jolted by Glen Skov, Hawks' tough defensive forward and sidelined probably for the balance of the season with broken vertebrae.

Although loaded with speed and scoring power the Habitants will welcome back Maurice Richard, all-time scoring leader and especially effective play-off marksman. To date Maurice has won for the Montrealers no less than 18 play-off games with clutch goals.

To the beginning of this season the flying Frenchman had scored 508 regular season goals in 885 games for an average of one goal every 1.75 games. He has even improved on this great record in play-off action scoring 81 times in 121 games for an average of one goal every 1.49 games. It's no wonder there was no cheering done in the camps of the Bruins, Hawks and Leafs when Richard's availability became known.

Just about everything that could be said about Maurice Richard has already been said many times over. This amazing piece of hockey machinery seems able to shake off crippling injuries time and again and come back to strike fear into the hearts of his opponents. Yet time is a cruel master that must be served and even Richard must slow down sometime.

What do you think? If Montreal eliminates Chicago will it again be the magnificent Maurice Richard whose overtime or last-period goals frustrate the lofty ambitions of the Cinderella Leafs or battling Bruins?

—Dennis O'Neill.

MAURICE RICHARD

ber of 20-minute periods may be played (with 10-minute intermissions) until a deciding goal is scored.

Good news for Montreal Canadiens fans came in the form of an announcement recently that the fabulous clutch performer Maurice Richard was expected to be back in uniform for the finals. Canadiens officials were assuming that their power-house would first side-track the Chicago Black Hawks. At the time of this writing Montreal leads Chicago two games to one and is an odds-on favourite to scaring him to death. When young Janet Perronay’s aunt and uncle, who are waiting for her ailing grandfather to die, learn that she has been frightened by the sight of a mechanical man in a downtown shop they decide to make use of Janet’s experience as a plan for murder. Charles Jarrot, producer. From Toronto.

“Belief”

In response to many requests, the text of the hour-long telecast March 5 in which eight distinguished Canadians gave some of their views concerning religious beliefs has been published by the CBC in a 32-page booklet.

The interviewer was Dr. George Grant of Dalhousie University, and the participants were Montreal investment expert Archie B. Bennet, business executive William J. Bennet, author and editor Robertson Davies, housewife and church worker Mrs. J. L. Halpenny, physicist Dr. K. C. Macdonald, world-famous neurologist Dr. W. G. Penfield, social worker Miss Bessie Touzel, and psychiatrist Dr. Victorin Voyer.

Each was asked: What comes to your mind when you think of the word “God”? Why do you think there is so much evil and suffering in the world? Do you believe in human progress? What, in your opinion, is the meaning of life?

Their composite answer as presented on CBC-TV forms a vital document. For your copy of the text send 50¢ in cheque, postal note or money order to:

• I am writing to complain about one program that should never have been put on television. Last week’s Explorations was absolutely horrible to say the least. I don’t know how any normal person would listen or watch or let their children watch and listen to such idiotic remarks made by a man who is supposed to be a man of knowledge. I do not know why or how you could produce a program to tell people that they were once ani-

Drama Head Appointed

Michael Sadlier, 34, has been named Supervising Producer of CBC Television drama in Toronto, it was announced recently by Mr. H. G. Walker, CBC Director for Ontario and English networks. Up until this appointment, Esse W. Ljungh, CBC’s National Drama Supervisor has also been acting as Supervising Producer for Television Drama.

“We have been looking for a man of Mr. Sadlier’s capabilities for several months,” stated Mr. Walker. “On the basis of a trial period just concluded we felt that he will make a significant contribution to television drama and will also provide Mr. Ljungh with the support he needs in further developing English language radio and television drama across the country. We also feel that Mr. Ljungh has done a remarkable job of carrying the work load of two men for a period of several months.

Michael Sadlier was born in Ireland but he is now a Canadian citizen and a noted drama producer. He was first associated with Peterborough Summer Theatre in Canada. Last year he produced two filmed TV series for I.T.A. in England, and recently he sold out his interest in two television series being produced for United Artists in Canada in order to come to the CBC in February this year as special consultant for television drama production.

will similarly benefit from division and specialization.

Specialization has in turn led to a failure in cultural standards and in discipline; if the humanist is the arbiter of standards, he is of necessity the personification of self-control, and on this subject, the scientist has nothing to say. The human race needs self-discipline, the control of material wealth, of cultural and ethical standards and indeed, the self-control of consciousness itself as never before: if we fail to control ourselves, there is no shortage of other candidates for the role of Big Brother. The humanist can never be valued for the immediate product of his labour, as the technician is, but he can be, if he wishes, the highest valued member of society, valued for the sake of his standards and self-discipline. If, on the other hand, he fails, our culture is left to the tender mercies of the financier, the labour organizer, the huckster and the soldier. It should be unnecessary for me to ask the humanist for standards, yet this I must do. Science has no standards of culture, no decorum relevant to any field but her own. We have to turn elsewhere—to the humanists.

You ask us scientists to tell you what to do with our discoveries? Scientists are specialists in a narrow field, and are not, as scientists, informed about the wider implications of man's endeavour. For this reason, there is something horribly fatuous about petitions and processions and conferences of scientists and scientific philosophers (Yes, I include Russell), who are protesting their fear of nuclear weapons. They will not be heard for a number of reasons. Among these is the failure of our teachers in the humanities to do their job; the humanists have no processions or petitions because they have no message. The fact that the scientists' discoveries have precipitated the crisis is irrelevant; scientists have perforce to advance, and this is something that the humanist is only dimly aware of; in his groping he is terrified of the implications for him of advances in technology, insofar as he understands them; of the implications for the future of the world, he has not the faintest conception. Yet cannot we expect that morals, ethics and just plain self-discipline should advance as fast as our technology?

So, we demand a positive lead from the humanists. We need men with a deep understanding of humanism in its highest sense. We need less study of knowledge and more pondering of wisdom, first in the universities, then in the governments of nations, and finally in the councils of the world. We need thunderers, roarsers, who are men of goodwill and true humanity. You come forward and speak your minds or we perish.

mals. Possibly the man who made these remarks is an animal or a descendant of one, but I don't believe the rest of the world are. I think that the CBC should be ashamed of themselves for letting such a person in front of a television camera to say the things which he did. If this is the only kind of programs the CBC can produce then they should fold up as a TV or radio company.—A. Siemens, Winnipeg.

"Salad Days"

• Congratulations to "CBC Folio" on its production of Salad Days. I was fortunate enough to see the stage show in London two years ago, and feel that the TV version by Folio was in every way as excellent and satisfying a performance. It also brought back memories of a very happy evening in the old country.—H. D. Faulkner, Winnipeg.

• I am writing to tell you how much we enjoyed last night's production of Salad Days. Everything about it—acting, dancing, singing, musical arrangements, sets, and staging—was superlative, and we wanted to express our appreciation to the CBC for a completely delightful experience.—A. A., Fort Garry, Man.

• What is this program called "Folio" and exactly what is it that it is supposed to bring across to us viewers? By this I mean a production like Salad Days. To me it represented a whole clan of otherwise normal human beings having flipped their lids and demoralizing themselves and making utter fools of themselves in front of home-loving folks that would have appreciated watching a good solid, sensible story. Instead it makes one want to take a good dose of nerve pills in order to be able to stand the strain. Wake up and try to present a program worthwhile instead of wasting two solid hours with nonsense. I'm speaking for many others when I say that I'm surprised and disgusted at CBC for thinking that Salad Days has any value. It just shows that the people responsible should consult their psychiatrist. If you must have "Folio" please present something worthwhile, and not another boo-boo like Salad Days.—Mrs. N. L., Steinbach, Man.

• "Folio" is not one of my favourite programs to date, but I just had to drop a line to tell you how much we enjoyed Salad Days yesterday evening.—G. B., Winnipeg.

• I have just spent one of my most pleasant evenings before the television set. Salad Days was grand in every way. If the opportunity arises to show it again my family will certainly be watching. It was sensational.—Mrs. L. J. F., Winnipeg.

• Congratulations on a wonderful show—Salad Days. It was most delightful. The talented company deserve every praise. "Folio" is fascinating, although not always appealing to me and many others. Nevertheless, by exploring every field of dramatic presentation it has offered wonderful fare to the Canadian public and has given talented Canadians wonderful opportunities. I look forward to future presentations.—J. M., Fort Garry, Man.

Revised "Times"

• Just a line to say how much I like the new set-up in the CBC Times. It is a great improvement over the old one. The idea of having each day's programs available at a glance is something I have thought of for a long time. And the write-ups on the various personalities and programs are an education in themselves. Keep up the good work.—Miss B. Eason, Wawanesa, Man.

Good Friday Programs

• I wish to thank you for your inspiring Good Friday programs, especially for Stations of the Cross. All the Sisters here at the Provincial House viewed it with admiration and respect. The photographer who took the close-ups certainly made an artistic job, and we congratulate him.—Sister Cecile Rioux, S. G.M., Provincial Secretary, The Sisters of Charity (Grey Nuns), St. Boniface.

Perry Como

• I may be only one of many who will write to put Mrs. E. Luca straight on this matter of Perry Como's salary. The contract is for 66 one-hour colour telecasts over the next two years. This means about $375,000 per show. Mr. Como will pay expenses out of this amount and retain the balance. Finally he will continue to receive $1,200,000 a year from the network as a performer. Dozens of people are involved in the preparation and staging of TV shows. All these people must be paid each week for their efforts. As an example, the writer for the present Saturday programs receives $11,500 for each show. And let's not forget Uncle Sam. Yes, the figure quoted may look exorbitant, but really it won't mean too much more for Perry Como personally.—C. W. Grierson, Winnipeg.

Saturday Television

PROGRAM NOTES APRIL 18

Zorro

This week—"Manhunt." Mountain Man Joe Crane, in a final effort to retrieve his impounded furs, tangles with his enemy Don Carlos Fernandez once again. Fernandez has an elaborate plan to annihilate Crane, but Zorro has other ideas and rides to the rescue. (Last program).

Rin Tin Tin

This week—"Scotchman's Gold." Lieut. Rip Masters heads a search party to the hills near Lost Scotchman's Mine to find a run-away orphan. Rusty and Rinty locate both the orphan and the Scotchman himself, but run into some unexpected trouble with a pair of greedy gunmen.

On the Frontier of Space

Last of three programs on the future of space travel. This week's program is based on speculation, and attempts to answer such questions as: How far into space can man go? How would a space ship be provisioned? Can good communication be established? Will the once-ridiculed ideas of Jules Verne become reality after all?

Mr. Fix-It

This week Peter Whitall shows how to build a gun rack and how to use a band saw. From Toronto.

Ivanhoe

Adventure series based on Sir Walter Scott's novel. This week Ivanhoe helps to foil a plot by an evil baron to force the peasants from some land so that he may buy it cheaply.

Saturday Date

With Billy O'Connor and his orchestra, singers Allan Blye, Vanda King and Donald Parrish. This week's guests are singer Lorraine Foreman and dancer Joey Hollingsworth. From Toronto.

Naked City

Adventure series based on New York City police cases. This week—Baker's Dozen."

Juliette

With singers Juliette and the Romeos and Bobby Gimby's orchestra. Tonight's program is a tribute to the late Glen Miller, and the group will perform some of the songs he made popular, including Moonlight Serenade, Chatanooga Choo Choo, Kalamazoo, and String of Pearls. From Toronto.

Program notes and station listings begin on page 20

Starting Saturday—

The Game of the Day

Live radio coverage of major league baseball—National and American Leagues—weekly to September 26

MARCH 21 marked the official beginning of spring, but for those western Canadians who haven't noticed that winter is supposed to be gone, we have another sign of spring.

The Game of the Day baseball series between the National and the American league teams starts April 18 on CBC radio. Surely this is sufficient proof that winter has disappeared, even if the final game of the Stanley Cup hockey playoffs does take place after the first Game of the Day!

The Game of the Day will replace the Metropolitan Opera broadcasts weekly until September 26. Commentary on the games will be by Mutual Broadcasting System sportscasters John McLean, Joe Wilson, Don Dunphy, and Gene Elston. Between innings Doug Maxwell and Jim Chorley will supply Canadian listeners with the latest sports news of special interest to them.

Game of the Day starts at 12:30 p.m. on CBW, 11:30 a.m. on CBK and CBX. Happy listening on the lawn!

MUSIC ON RADIO

By DR. BOYD NEEL, Dean, Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto

In 1893 Dvorak had the idea of writing a kind of symphony descriptive of various aspects of life. It was to be in three movements and each movement was to have a title. He called the first Amidst Nature, the second Carnival and the third, Othello, the idea being that the first movement would depict the innocent outdoor happiness of children; the second, the joys and fresh love-making of youth, and the third, the deeper passions and tragedies of the soul. Eventually, it would seem that he abandoned the idea of making these all one work and they were published separately as overtures.

The concert overture, that is a piece which is not the prelude to any particular opera, is a form which came into being about the middle of the 19th century. I think Mendelssohn's Fingal's Cave was about the first composition of this kind. Why the title "overture" was chosen for these pieces, I have not the slightest idea, but, since then, the title has become very loosely used, and we all know how very vague the title "prelude" has become. There are hundreds of "preludes" in music which are not preludes to anything at all, but are complete pieces on their own account.

The overtures of Dvorak which came from this original idea have a musical motif common to all three of them, this being a relic of Dvorak's original symphonic scheme. On Tuesday evening on the CBC Dominion and French networks we can hear the Othello Overture, the third of the group, at the T.S.O. concert. It begins with a slow introduction, which,

Abstract Art and Earthy Songs

Winnipeg painter-folk singer Kelly Clark competes in Trans-Canada Talent Show semi-final this Sunday

A book of sea shanties collected by Burl Ives launched the folk-singing career of Winnipeg's Kelly Clark, one of the semi-finalists on this week's Trans-Canada Talent Show from Toronto. It is only three years since Ives' Sea Songs gave the young Winnipeg artist's career an unexpected turn.

Clark sings folk songs just to entertain himself and his friends.

KELLY CLARK

Before appearing on the Trans-Canada Talent Show he had never sung before on radio or television. In fact his singing experience included only a few informal get-togethers and one concert at the University of Manitoba School of Fine Arts. Feeling that the more experienced competition on the talent show was too much for him, he already had his hat and coat on and was ready to leave the Playhouse Theatre when the surprising decision was announced.

Far more serious about his career as an artist than about his singing, Kelly laughs at the popular conception of the poor artist starving in his garret. Although he refuses to take the line of least resistance and become a commercial artist, Kelly sells his paintings for over $250. He has won prizes at the Winnipeg Art Show on two occasions.

Now 23, Kelly was born and educated in Winnipeg, and has a degree in fine arts from the University of Manitoba. He grew his heavy, well-styled beard while working as a fishing guide in the Whiteshell area of Ontario.

Kelly's repertoire includes some 200 folk songs and he is continually looking for new ones. He gets his songs from many sources. A viewer of CBWT's Mary Liz Show provided the words for one of his songs after seeing him on television.

Interested in furthering his career in art, Kelly would like to go to Britain and France to paint and study.

What Goes On In Our Schools?

Marjorie McEnaney

A nationwide survey of what education comprises for Canadian children today, and what the students, teachers, parents and others involved think about it, and about each other, will be presented on Trans-Canada Matinee in a series of six weekly broadcasts called "What Goes On In Our Schools". The series begins Wednesday, April 15.

To prepare the broadcasts, free-lance broadcaster Marjorie McEnaney, armed with a tape recorder, travelled across the country, invading schools, homes and offices in rural and urban areas. The first study of its kind done on a national scale in Canada, her series will consist largely of the recordings she made of classes in session, and of interviews with pupils, teachers, parents, school trustees and school superintendents.

Mrs. McEnaney's investigation carried her into public, private, high and technical schools, in Calgary, Winnipeg, Regina, Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa and a number of rural districts. The frank, informative, and often amusing interviews she recorded will, she believes, prove as interesting to listeners as they did to her.

The pupils, she found, were "very unself conscious." To them the tape recorder was just another device in a world filled with devices. Most of them exhibited as little hesitation in saying exactly what they thought as the small boy who declared: "The worst experience I ever had in school was in grade two when I did a drawing and the teacher didn't like it and I kicked her. She was the worst teacher I ever had."

Mrs. McEnaney's interest in education goes back to more than 30 years ago when she taught in an elementary school in Calgary and in a rural high school in Alberta. Her interest in broadcasting has also been a long-standing one. For 15 years she was a program organizer with the CBC department of talks and public affairs. Earlier this season she prepared another series for Trans-Canada Matinee, "For Better or For Worse".

Six areas of discussion have been chosen for the present series which Helen Carscallen, of the CBC's department of Women's Interests, describes as "probably the most important series that Matinee has ever undertaken." The role of the teacher will be examined in the first program—"An Apple for The Teacher". Teachers will talk about themselves, their work, their training, and their feelings about what they are accomplishing.

In the second program, "Who Studies What and Why?", the curricula of Canadian schools will be discussed by well-known personalities. (Please turn to page 29) sports and sportsmanship. Today's broadcast is entitled "Hockey—The Game of Speed." At the beginning of the broadcast listeners will hear the story of the first recorded game of hockey in Kingston, Ontario, in 1855. Mention of the Hockey Hall of Fame now located in Kingston will lead listeners to a series of flashbacks showing how the game changed and evolved to its present importance. Again stress will be laid on the importance of a good physique and the development of the many skills required of the players to make hockey the extremely fast game it is. The program concludes with an actuality treatment of an historical hockey game.

MUSIC NOTES

apparently, was to have been an independent slow movement when the three overtures were to form a symphony together. There is no real connection with the story of Shakespeare's play and we must regard the title as purely descriptive of mood.

On Sunday evening the CBC Symphony is playing, besides symphonies by Honegger and Mendelssohn, a Suite from Prokofieff's opera The Love for Three Oranges. This work is to be given at the Toronto Opera Festival in the fall, so Toronto listeners will be able to get some idea of the music beforehand by listening to the suite. This opera had its first performance in Chicago in 1921, when Prokofieff himself conducted it. Since then it has been performed all over the world with the greatest success, and the well known March is staple fare of all "pop" concerts. The opera is a farcical story taken from a play by Gozzi. In the Prologue we see people arguing as to what opera shall be played on that particular evening, and while this discussion is going on, heralds enter to tell them that they may as well save their breaths, as they are going to see something quite different to what they are accustomed. The farcical atmosphere is established immediately by a so-called "trumpeter" entering and playing on a bass trombone. The oranges of the title are connected with a curse pronounced on the Prince, the hero of the story. His fate is to fall in love with three oranges which he will never attain and which he will pursue all his life to the ends of the earth. It is altogether a delightful work—one of the best fairy-tale operas in the repertoire—and we shall all look forward to seeing it during the Festival in October.

THE AD-LIBS

Winnipeg vocal quartet, are guests this Tuesday on "Song Album." Left—Herb Lother; centre—Robert Farrar (top) and Paul Fredette (bottom); and right—Henri Enns. "Song Album" is heard at 7:45 p.m. on CBW, CBK, and CBX. The Ad-Libs will also be guests on "The Show That Jack Built" this Friday on CBWT.

Toronto's Glenn Gould has a busy week. On Saturday night he plays the Mozart C minor Concerto K. 491 with the New York Philharmonic and on Tuesday evening, with the T.S.O. we can hear him in the Beethoven fifth. These are both works which Gould has played a great deal with his usual astounding success. In May this year he is to play all five Beethoven concertos in London and this will be his first appearance in the British capital.

There are very interesting song recitals this week. On Monday evening, Donald Brown is going to sing the cycle by Finzi: Earth, Air and Rain. Gerald Finzi, whose recent lamentable death at an early age was one of the greatest losses to British music, left us many works of extraordinary beauty and (Please turn to page 29)

A Beach of Strangers

A foretaste of this week's Wednesday Night program

by JAMES BANNERMAN

The principal program on CBC Wednesday Night this week is A Beach of Strangers, by John Reeves, and nothing more remarkable has been broadcast in Wednesday Night's history than this long poem in which the special possibilities of radio are explored with great skill and originality, and which can properly be considered an important work of art.

That such things can be said of it would be quite enough to make it remarkable even if it had no special and distinct character of its own. But A Beach of Strangers has its own character, and thus doesn't stand out merely as a kind of achievement in a genre—though it is certainly that among other things, and indeed an achievement in several genres at once. It has formal resemblances to some of the writing of Dylan Thomas, and of T. S. Eliot, and of W. H. Auden, and here and there the resemblances go deeper than form; yet the vitality of Reeves' poem excuses it from a superficial charge of derivation. What has happened, it seems to me, is that particular forces which have imposed various ways of expression on Thomas and Eliot and Auden have imposed them on Reeves too, and that he has expressed them in somewhat similar ways but in terms fundamentally his own.

A Beach of Strangers, as a good poem must be, is a statement about life—inherent from the beginning, repeated contrapuntally and melodically, and resolved at the end in a coda of power and beauty and hope. And this analogy with musical construction is both inevitable and astonishing, since many passages of the poem are on the face of them flatly banal, in subject and to a considerable extent in treatment. But the face of these passages is a mask that never quite hides the vivid distinguishable soul beneath, and never blunts the sharp private agonies and joys. It is among the excellences of A Beach of Strangers that it recognizes how often the food of the gods is disguised as chocolate creams or ham and eggs, and that the most cloying and synthetic soft drink, taken at a moment of illumination—or at a moment of unseen light that casts a seen and uncomprehended shadow—can be the purest nectar.

The strangers on Reeves' beach, which from internal evidence is a faintly tatty stretch of the seacoast of England, are on the whole persons it would be easy and pleasant to dismiss as of no consequence. That is to say, they could be so dismissed if Reeves hadn't seen through them and been merciful to what he saw. Because of that they are people who are neither strangers nor lightly to be brushed off. They may not be you, but I must ruefully admit that most of them are me—and that this is truest

Manitoba Festival Daily on CBW

Winnipeg organist and conductor Filmer Hubble will bring Manitoba listeners daily reports on the second week of classes at the 41st Manitoba Musical Competition Festival this week on CBW.

The half-hour reports will be heard Monday to Friday, starting at 5 p.m. The programs will consist of recordings of winning performances, adjudicators' comments, and interviews with the five adjudicators (Ronald Biggs, Noel Cox, Henry Cummings, Leslie Woodgate, and Lorne Watson).

This is the 11th successive year that CBW has carried reports on the famous Manitoba festival. For the past 10 years music producer Tom Taylor has handled both the production and commentary. This year Mr. Hubble has been engaged to comment on the classes in order to allow Mr. Taylor more time to cope with the job of production which, like the festival itself, grows larger each year.

Mr. Hubble brings to this assignment a broad background of experience as a musician (conductor and organist on Sunday Chorale), adjudicator (at festivals in all parts of Canada), and festival performer (his own church choirs have been consistent festival winners for many years, and he is one of the busiest festival accompanists every year).

CBC recording equipment will be in the Winnipeg Civic Auditorium for all classes during the second week of the festival. All performances will be recorded, and some of the winning performances will be selected for the daily broadcasts.

ties in the educational world. Various methods of instruction, such as the "project method", will be considered in the third broadcast, "Learning by Doing." Listeners will learn about the teaching of languages and the physical and neurological aspects of it as viewed by Dr. Wilder Penfield of Montreal in the fourth program, "French Without Tears". Parents', students' and teachers' views on the function of extra-curricular activities will be aired in the next broadcast, "Should They Dance and Sing?" The final program, "Our Educational Fall-Out" will delve into the problem of "bright" children who leave school before or immediately after completing high school.

it will never be known to what great heights he might have attained if he had lived. Probably his most beautiful work is Dies Natalis, a song cycle with words taken from Thomas Traherne. Whether the inclusion of a song by George Butterworth in this same recital was intentional or not, I have no idea, but it is a strange coincidence that both Finzi and Butterworth died at an early age and were both probably the most promising young composers that England had at their respective times. Butterworth was killed in the First Great War and is probably best known for his settings of the Shropshire Lad. He also worked a great deal with Cecil Sharpe when that pioneer was making his great folk-song discoveries.

when they are least admirable. But some of the ironically-designated strangers, and in particular an old man named Popescu, have characters and are led by motives of the highest distinction in the sense of value rather than of eminent place. The beach, in short, has a predictably and rightly mixed crowd of bathers; though they appear on the whole to be tormented by an unmixed urge to merge, ranging from a sort of starved and sniggering lubricity to a wholesome and straightforward desire. I don't remember ever to have read a poem of unquestionable decency in which there was anything like so strong an undercurrent of rut—an instinct not as a rule counted one of the things that are fondly thought to set man apart from other animals. It seems to me to be one of the salient merits of this very meritorious work that its essential cleanliness isn't obscured by what in less honest hands than Reeves' might well be veils of shoddiness. He has now and again clothed Aphrodite in pretty cheap underwear, but has almost never let its vulgarity shroud the lovely lines of her body.

I think the quality that runs through and informs A Beach of Strangers is respect for its material—the human condition, so lamentable and wonderful, so bound yet so free to long for freedom. It is as I said a statement about life; and it ends, as I implied, in hope. Reeves appears to believe that it is possible for us all to feel a divine discontent at our 'strangerhood', and a virtue in us to strive for brotherhood instead—not the facile notion of it that makes the heart swell smugly and the eyes sting with too-ready tears, but a concept that takes into account the difficulty of reaching out to those who are nearest to us on the beach, the uncountable chances of failing to touch them even if we make the effort, and the one glorious chance that we shall succeed.

"GHOST WRITERS"

Dr. Helen Creighton of Dartmouth, N.S., is seen surrounded by "ghost" writers who are adapting stories from her book Bluenose Ghosts for a summer series of stories on CBC radio. The program, Bluenose Ghosts, is heard each Friday on the Trans-Canada network. The script-writers, all from Nova Scotia, are (reading clockwise) Doug Fraser, Kay Hill, A. H. Matheson, and Barbara Grantmyre.

sons of sanitation, economy, human relations, or health (like "Lose 10 pounds")—no, things you simply want to do. Like, "Try new lipstick shade". Or, "Phone Jane". Or, "Spend that 10 dollars Aunt Phillis sent for my birthday before it disappears into the household money and is never seen again".

This gambit will get you off to a quick start; but toward the end you are faced with the problem of the almost-finished list that threatens to hang on for ever. The solution for this is a touch of sloppiness. When you see a list reaching that point, doodle on it absent-mindedly, spill nail-polish on it, let the baby get near it with a color crayon. Then of course you simply start a new list, copy the uncanceled items onto it, and destroy the old one, being sure, of course, to put a lot of new items on the new list, so that you will have something to cross out. In this way you are never annoyed by the one or two stubborn items that survive all your best intentions.

Well, that about winds up the basic principles of good list-making.

ing. With practice and perseverance and a little ingenuity, I think you can develop your skill with lists to the point where you can accomplish an awful lot without doing much of anything. Oh—my husband says he has caught me putting at the top of a list something I have already done, in order to cross it out, but I haven't done that more than once or twice, or maybe three times. After all, that wouldn't really be honest, would it?
